Professional Diver From Green Bay Removes Obstructions From Local Intake Pipe.

The Stevens Point Water Co.'s stone crib in the Wisconsin river, which was damaged by ice a week ago Sunday, was cleaned out on Monday of this week by G. A. Green, a professional diver from Green Bay.

Mr. Green donned his diver's suit and descended into the water at 11:05 o'clock Monday morning and continued at work, almost without interruption, until 2:15 in the afternoon. Supt. E. P. Trautmann handled the lines for him, two men worked the pumps and two other men assisted in removing the stone, chips and other debris in baskets. In all between 20 and 30 bushels of refuse were taken out of the crib, which is about 18 feet deep. The intake pipe, which is 18 inches in diameter, was cleared of all obstructions and the strainer was thoroughly cleaned, so that the capacity of the pumps is materially increased.

The equipment that Mr. Green wore weighs about 390 pounds. In order to do his work he was compelled to discard hand covering and as a result suffered greatly from the icy water.

The Water Co. will not attempt to rebuild the crib until the water is warm and at a low stage. The diver's equipment used by Mr. Green has been left here and will be used by Mr. Trautmann, who had some experience in the work while at Menomonie. The damage to the crib is entirely below the water line.

Mr. Green was recently elected one of the commissioners of Green Bay, which is about to make the actual change to the commission form of government. He expects to give up the diving game, during his term of office at least.

A Distinctive Reason

What is the chief reason for the superiority of Royal Baking Powder?

There are several good reasons, but there is one which distinguishes Royal from other baking powders.

This reason, which every woman should know, is that Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, which comes from grapes. This means a healthful fruit origin. It means natural food as distinguished from mineral substitutes used in other baking powders.

There is no alum nor phosphate in Royal Baking Powder

Mrs. Frank Abel, Mrs. Mark Whitrock and Mrs. Carson Burt returned to their homes at Grand Rapids today. They had been guests at the home of their sister, Mrs. R. W. Morse, the two former since yesterday morning and the last named since last Saturday.

Wm. Creasey, whose loyalty to his country is attested by an armless sleeve, left for Appleton on Monday to join Mrs. Creasey and make his permanent home in that city. Mr. Creasey hopes to visit Stevens Point frequently.

James Meehan of Milwaukee, who had been spending the past week at the home of his son in St. Paul, arrived in the city this afternoon to make a visit at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Pfiffner.

John and Frank Turinski, both residents of this city, were brought before Judge Murat Tuesday and assessed fines of $5.00 and costs each. John, who is on the "black list," secured a quantity of liquor through the aid of his namesake and was arrested for drunkenness. Frank was charged with giving or selling liquor to a posted person.

Frank Leuschen, postmaster at Marathon City and publisher of The Times newspaper, spent Monday in town, coming here to attend a meeting of the Foresters court and deliver an address to the members and a large number of prospective candidates. Mr. Leuschen is an able speaker and made a favorable impression upon his good sized audience.

A. L. Rounds and Frank Hjertberg of Amherst attended to business matters in this city Tuesday. Mr. Rounds was last week re-elected as president of Amherst village, defeating Ray Peterson by a majority of three votes. The successful candidate is used to close elections, though, as he won out in a contest a few years ago by only two majority over L. J. Carey.

Peter Tufelski, who now lives in Sharon township, made a substantial payment of good American dollars in Judge Murat's court yesterday, he being found guilty on two charges. The first was for using abusive language, the fine and costs in which totaled $8.95, and he also paid $3.95 for driving his team on or across a sidewalk. Both offenses were committed Feb. 3rd.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of It in Stevens Point But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed; Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood.

When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.

Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble.

It is often the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

Mrs. Allen, 831 Ellis street, Stevens Point, says: "For about eight years, I had severe backaches I suffered from sharp, shooting pains in the small of my back and I was restless and tired at night. At times, my kidneys were quite irregular in action. I felt nervous and run down. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills helped me so much, that I continued taking them. Four boxes cured me. Recently, some of the old symptoms of kidney trouble returned, but Doan's Kidney Pills again fixed me up in good shape."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Health Creates Wealth.

One of the largest manufacturing companies in the United States, one whose products are distributed all around the earth, employs a medical man to look after conditions which affect the physical welfare of its thousands of employees. His function in the company is similar to that of an engineer except that his problem concerns human beings instead of the machines that make the company's product.

Inasmuch as the manufacturing processes are such as to entail a rather high industrial accident and industrial disease rate, he was put on the job to reduce the waste of human life and human health as much as it could be reduced.

The factory's grindstones were known to be killing men by throwing off fine particles of stone and steel which injured the lung tissues of the workers and thus produced conditions favorable to the development of tuberculosis and pneumonia. When the "medical engineer" got on the job, his first attention was directed to these lung diseases. It was found that the method of grinding was directly and indirectly killing the greatest proportion of workers. The doctor, therefore, began a bombardment of the mechanical engineers to devise some method of grinding which would reduce the disease-hazard of the employees.

As a result of this agitation, one of the mechanical engineers studied the problem thoroughly and with most satisfactory results: A process of grinding has been installed which eliminates the chance of employees' lungs being filled with stone and steel. Incidentally the cost of grinding has been reduced so much that the price of the expensive machine equipment of this large plant was returned to the owners in a single year in reduced manufacturing costs. As a second incident, the product has been refined and improved greatly, thus insuring better satisfied customers.

Verily, virtue brought its own reward in this instance—and speedily too. The owners' only interest in the beginning was to save life and health. That their profits increased is gratifying. Gradually evidence is accumulating to prove that erecting safeguards against industrial accidents and disease is not alone humane and just, but that it is likewise "good business."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Home grown seed, if properly cured and of good quality, will yield heavier than seed brought from a distance.

Only those ears should be saved for seed which have six strong vigorous surmounted kernels in the germination box.

A good yield of corn depends upon a number of factors, of which three of the most important are the selection, the curing, and the testing of the seed. Under average farm conditions, the proper amount of care taken in securing the best seed will be more than repaid.

Many devices have been recommended for the testing of seed corn, nearly all of which have their advantages. However, after using many different kinds of testers the station has found the common square box tester also called "the sawdust box tester" to be one of the best.

"The Babcock tester has been a wonderful factor in the development of dairying in Texas. It has enabled the dairy farmer to weed out unprofitable individuals. It has placed the creameries on a practical buying basis and has given the colleges a method of solving the more important economic problems of dairying."—J. W. Ridgeway, College Station, Texas.

Three things—selection, curing and germination—can do more toward producing a bigger and better corn crop than anything else. By selection, the farmer improves his corn, growing larger, heavier, and better ears; by properly curing it, he insures himself against seed which is of low vitality; by a germination test he avoids the sterile ears, and plants only seed which will make the most profitable returns.

The state seed inspection laboratories use tin plate testers in making germination tests on the samples of corn, small grains, and grass seeds in which are sent in for testing, but in place of the flannel cloths, square pieces of heavy blotting paper are used. They find the testers very reliable and accurate if a temperature of from 60 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit is maintained for four or five days and the cloths or blotters kept moist.

During the past ten years the quality and yield of corn in Wisconsin has greatly increased, largely because of the use of especially bred dent varieties. These new high producing strains are larger eared, deeperkerneled, and supplied with a more abundant foliage than the old varieties. Better care is now needed in the selection and curing of seed corn than was necessary with the early, shallowkerneled and not infrequently scrub varieties. Yet, on some farms, the same methods of selecting and curing seed corn are now practiced as were used years ago, and in many instances no attempt is made to test the seed for germination.

TEST YOUR SEED OATS.

The seed laboratory of the United States department of agriculture has recently made a germination test of seed oats from the states of Indiana, Iowa and Kansas. These should represent a fair average of the seed that will be sowed this spring, as the seed came from farmers in response to requests for samples of the oats they are going to sow themselves.

The average germination was lowest for Indiana and the highest for Iowa. Of the 2,900 samples tested from the three states 268 or over 9 per cent germinated less than 75 per cent, 122 samples over four per cent germinated less than 50 per cent, and 54 samples or nearly 2 per cent germinated less than 25 per cent. This shows that much of the seed oats intended to be used this spring germinates poorly and that germination tests should be made in all cases before sowing.

At the same time the above tests were made 576 samples taken from car lots of commercial oats were tested, the average germination being 78 per cent. This shows that where commercial oats must be depended on for a seed supply it is even more important to test the seed for germination than when local supplies are relied on.

Seed showing a low grade of germination should either not be sown or enough extra seed should be used to insure getting a good stand.

OUR CLUBBING OFFER.

Through a special arrangement we are able to offer a clubbing rate of $4.25 a year for The Gazette and the Milwaukee Daily Journal. The Gazette is the most widely read newspaper in Central Wisconsin, presents all the news in a clean, readable manner, with special attention to the rural districts; the Milwaukee Journal is a metropolitan newspaper in every sense of the word. The regular price of The Gazette is two dollars and of the Milwaukee Journal three dollars. Send us your order for both at $4.25, strictly in advance.

POSTOFFICE RECEIPTS BIG.

The receipts at the Stevens Point postoffice totalled $9,137.28 during the first three months of the year 1916, which is $333.07 less than was taken in during the corresponding period last year. However, last year a large quantity of special advertising was mailed, making the receipts above normal, while the amount of newspaper postage was about $100 greater. Some of the principal items of expense during the quarter just closed follow: Clerical service, $1,820.25; railway mail clerks, $2,138.92; city carriers, $2,191.89. These are some of the principal receipts: Stamp sale, $8,049.91; newspaper postage, $902.05; box rent, $106.29; postage on circulars without stamps, $74.43.

TO RID CHILD OF WORMS.

Don't scold the fretful, nervous child. Often its due to worms. Get rid of these by giving one-half to one lozenge Kickapoo Worm Killer, a laxative worm candy. Give only plain nourishing food, lots of out-door exercise and put to bed early. Watch stools and continue giving Kickapoo Worm Lozenges, they will positively remove the worms. 25 cents at druggists.

RECIPE FOR HAPPY LIFE.

Take a large quantity of Cheerfulness and let it simmer without stopping. Put with it a brimming basinful of Kindness, then add a full measure of Thought for Other People. Mix into these a piling table-spoon of Sympathy. Flavor with essence of Charity. Stir well together and then carefully strain off any grains of Selfishness. Let the whole be served with Love Sauce, and Fruit of the Spirit.

AVOID SPRING COLDS.

Sudden changes, high winds, shifting seasons cause colds and grippe, and these spring colds are annoying and dangerous and are likely to run into a chronic summer cough. In such cases take a treatment of Dr. King's New Discovery, a pleasant laxative tar syrup. It soothes the cough, checks the cold and helps break up an attack of grippe. Its already prepared no mixing or fussing. Just ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. Tested and tried for over 40 years.

Now it is said that there isn't a single moving picture machine with the punitive expedition. Thus another idol has been shattered.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

WASHINGTON, D. C.

SHORTAGE OF PAPER MATERIAL

Save Your Waste Paper and Rags

The attention of the Department of Commerce is called, by the president of a large paper manufacturing company, to the fact that there is a serious shortage of raw material for the manufacture of paper, including rags and old papers. He urges that the Department should make it known that the collecting and saving of rags and old papers would greatly better existing conditions for American manufacturers.

Something like 15,000 tons of different kinds of paper and paper board are manufactured every day in the United States and a large proportion of this, after it has served its purpose, could be used over again in some class of paper. A large part of it, however, is either burned or otherwise wasted. This, of course, has to be replaced by new materials.

In the early history of the paper industry publicity was given to the importance of saving rags. It is of scarcely less importance now. The Department of Commerce is glad to bring this matter to the attention of the public in the hope that practical results may flow from it. A little attention to the saving of rags and old papers will mean genuine relief to our paper industry and a diminishing drain upon our sources of supply for new materials.

A list of dealers in paper stocks can be obtained from the local Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade.

SYNOPSIS

Evelina, at the request of her rich friend Jane, attempts to demonstrate that it is possible and advisable for a woman to woo and win a mate just as a man does.

Evelina returns to her old home, where she meets her fifth cousin, James Hardin, whom she calls the "Crag," and insists on living with him.

Evelina watches outside her window all night. Evelina feels a revival of her former interest in Polk Hayes.

Also, her fondness for James grows, but she concludes that marrying him is out of the question.

Uncle Peter tells Evelina that Sally Caruthers will marry James and that James is likely to lose his fortune in a railroad scheme.

Evelina starts to tell Polk she loves him, but is interrupted. James' efforts to secure the new railroad line are not appreciated except by Evelina.

Evelina attempts to enlighten out her friends' love affairs and also interest herself in the new railroad project.

Richard Hall, a lover, telegraphs Evelina he is coming and that he wants an answer to his proposal.

Evelina declares that the railroad will take the Glendale bluff line as desired by her town. James is asked to run for governor.

James balks Evelina's attempt to help him become governor. Polk denounces her as a coquette. Getting the railroad seems hopeless.

James and Evelina plan to give the railroad commission a big barbecue. The Glendale men refuse to help entertain the magnates.

The women decide to get up the barbecue themselves. Evelina's friend, Jane, arrives and gives her able assistance to the scheme.

Polk becomes interested in Jane, and the men of Glendale boycott the barbecue, but the women are undaunted.

Evelina decides that James is the man she wants. Glendale women shame the men by doing the hard work for the barbecue.

CHAPTER XV.

Dynamite.

WHEN a man injures a woman's feelings by any particular course of conduct to which she objects the maternal in her rises to the surface, and she treats and forgives him as she would a naughty child, but a man makes any kind of woman affront into a lover's quarrel. That is what masculine Glendale has been doing to its women folks for four days, and I believe everybody has been secretly enjoying it.

As to the rally, they have stood aside with their hands in their pockets and their noses in the air, and if it hadn't been for Aunt Augusta and Nell and Jane being natural born carpenters and draymen we might have had to give it up and let them go on with it to their own glory.

When Nell and Jane went to see Mr. Dodd about building the long tables to serve the barbecue dinner on he said he was too busy to do it and hadn't even any lumber to sell.

Then things happened in my backyard that it sounds like a romance to write about. Jane sent me over to borrow the Crag's team and wagon and Henrietta and Cousin Martha and any of the rest of his woman impedimenta that I could get. He was out of town, trying a case over at Bolivar, and wouldn't get back until Monday night.

Jane and Nell and Aunt Augusta took the two axes and one large hammer and tore down my back fence while I and the others loaded the planks on the wagon. Jane appointed Henrietta to sit and hold the slow old horses in case they should have got demoralized by the militant atmosphere pervading Glendale and try to bolt. I never saw any human being enjoy herself as Henrietta did, and it was worth it all just to look into her radiant countenance.

Jane took all the hard top blows to do herself and left the unloosening of the lower nails to Aunt Augusta while Nell ripped off the planks that stuck. I could almost hear Nell's long, polished finger nails go with a rip every time she jerked a particularly tough old plank into subjection, and Aunt Augusta dispensed encouraging axioms about pioneer work as she banged along behind Jane. Jane herself looked as cool as a cucumber, didn't get the least bit ruffled and had the expression on her face that the truly normal woman has while she is hemming a baby's flannel petticoat.

And though during the day many delightful crises were precipitated the most interesting were the expressions that devastated Polk Hayes' and Lee Greenfield's faces as they came around the side of the house to see what all that hammering was about.

"Caroline!" exclaimed Lee, in perfect agony, as he beheld the lady of his ardent, though long restrained, affections poised across the wheel of the wagon tugging at the middle of a heavy plank which Mrs. Dodd and I were pushing up to her, while Mamie, the mother of seven, stood firmly on top of the wagon guiding it into place.

"Help!" gasped Polk, as he started to take the ax from Jane by force. Then we all stopped while Jane quietly gurgled the molasses of the situation to them, and sent them on down the street sadder and wiser men.

I thought Polk was going to cry on her shoulder before he was finally persuaded to go and leave us to our fate, and the expression on Lee's face as he looked up at torn, dirty, perspiring Caroline, with a smudge on her nose and blood on her hand from an absolutely insignificant scratch, was such as ought to have been on Ned's face as he ought to have been standing by Mamie with the asafetida bottle. That's mixed up, but the five ought to catch the point.

It took up all of Saturday afternoon and part of Monday morning, but we built those tables, thereby disciplining masculine Glendale with a severity that I didn't think could have been in us.

We all rested on Sunday—that is, ostensibly. Jane put down all sorts of things on paper that everybody had to do on Monday and on Tuesday. Henrietta sat by her in a state of trance, and it did me good to see Sallie out in the hammock at Widegables taking care of both the kit and the pup, laboriously assisted by panting Aunt Dillie, because Jane explained to her so beautifully that she needed a lot of Henrietta's time, that Sallie acquiesced with good natured bewilderment. Of course Cousin Jasmine helped her some, but she was busy aiding Cousin Martha to beat up some mysterious eggs in the kitchen, with the shutters shut because it was Sunday. It was something that takes two days to "set" and was to be the piece de resistance, after the barbecue.

Mrs. Hargrove couldn't help Sallie at all with the kiddies either, because she was looking through all her boxes and bundles for a letter from her son which she thought said something about favoring woman's rights, and if it is like she thinks it is she is going to go to the barbecue and get things nice and hot instead of having them brought to her cold.

I had hoped to get a few minutes Sunday afternoon to myself so I could go up into the garret and look through one of the trunks I brought from Paris with me to see how many sets of things I have got left. I am going to need a trousseau pretty soon, and I might need it more suddenly than I expect. I don't see any reason for people's not marrying immediately when they make up their minds, and my half of ours is made up strong enough to decidedly influence rapidly in his. But then I really don't believe that the Crag would care very much about the high lights of a trousseau, and it was just as well that Nell came in to get me to help her write a letter to national headquarters to know if she could have any kind of assignment in the campaign for the convention to alter the constitution in Tennessee when it meets next winter.

"Have you made up your mind fully to go in for public life, Nell?" I asked mildly. "Some of your friends might not like it very much and—"

"If you mean Polk Hayes, Evelina," Nell answered with the positiveness that only a very young person can get up the courage to use, "I have forgot that I was ever influenced by his narrow minded, primitive personality at all. If I ever love and marry it will be a man who can appreciate and further my real woman's destiny."

"Well, then, that's all right," I answered, with such relief in my heart that it must have showed in my voice and face. I had worried about Nell since I could see plainly, though she hasn't told me yet, and I am sure she doesn't realize it, that Jane had decided Polk's destiny. Nell is not twenty-one yet, and she will find lots of men in the world that will be fully capable of making her believe they feel that way about her destiny until they succeed in tying her up to using it for the real utilitarian purposes they are sure such a pretty woman is created for.

It will take men in general another hundred years yet and lots of suffering to realize that a woman's destiny is anything but herself and get to house-keeping with her on that basis.

The Crag didn't jog into Glendale on his rawboned old horse until 1:30 Monday night. I had been watching down Providence road for him from my pillow ever since I put out my light at 11 because Jane had decided that it was our duty to go to bed early so as to be as fresh as possible for the rally in the morning. She had walked to the gate with Polk at 10 and hadn't come back until 11, so, of course, she was ready to turn in. It was just foolish, primitive old convention that kept me from slipping on my slippers and dressing gown—I've got the prettiest ones that ever came across the Atlantic, Louise de Mereton, Rue de Rivoli, Paris—and going down to the gate to see him for just a minute. That second he stood undecided in the middle of the road looking at my darkened house was agony that I'm not going to put up with very much longer.

Jane and I with Henrietta were out by the old gray moss rock at the first break of day installing Jasper and Petunia and a few of their confreres. Jasper had always been king of all Glendale barbecue pits, and he had had them dug the day before and filled with dry hickory fires all night, and his men was so naughty that I trembled for the slaves under his command. His basket of "yarfs" was under the side of the rock in hoodoo-like shadows, and the wagons of poor, innocent, sacrificed lambs and turkeys and sucking pigs were backed up by the largest infernal pit. Petunia was already elbow deep in a cedar tub of cornmeal for the pones, and another minion was shucking late roasting ears and washing the sweet potatoes to be packed down with the meat by 8 o'clock. A wagon was to collect the baked hams and sandwiches and biscuits and confections of all variety and pedigree from the rest of the league at 10 o'clock.

We didn't know it then, but another wagon was already being loaded very privately in town with ice and bottles, glasses and lemons and mint and kegs and schooners. I am awfully glad that the Equality league had forgotten all about the wetting up of the rally, because I don't believe we would have been equal to the situation with Aunt Augusta and Jane both prohibition enthusiasts.

"Evelina," gasped Jane as we stood on the edge of the bluff that commands a view of almost all the Harpeth valley stretched out like the very garden of Eden itself, crossed by silver creeks, lined with broad roads and mantled in the richness of the harvest haze, "can all those wagons full of people be coming to accept our invitation?"

"Yes, they're our guests," I answered, with the elation of generations of rally givers rising in my breast as I saw the stream of wagons and carriages and buggies, with now and then a motorcar, all approaching Glendale from all points of the compass.

"Have we enough to feed them, Jasper?" she turned and asked in still further alarm.

"Nothing never give out in Glendale yet since we took the cover off the pits for Old Hickory in my granddad's time," he answered, with a trace of offense in his voice as he stood over a half tub of butter, mixing in his yarfs with mutterings that sounded like incantations. I drew Jane away, for I

"Yes; they're our guests," I answered, felt that it was no time to disturb him, when the basting of his baked meats was just about to begin.

I was glad that about all the countryside had gathered, unhitched their wagons, picketed their horses and got down to the enjoyment of the day before the motorcars bringing the distinguished guests had even started from Bolivar. It was great to watch the farmers slap neighbors on the back, exchange news and tobacco plugs, while the rosy women folks grouped and ungrouped in radiant good cheer with children squirming and tangling over and under and around the rejoicings.

"This, Evelina," remarked Jane, with controlled emotion in her voice and a mist in her eyes behind her glasses, "is not only the bone and sinew, but also the rich red blood in the arteries of our nation. I feel humbled and honored at being permitted to go among them."

And it was into an atmosphere of almost hilarious enjoyment that the distinguished commission arrived a few minutes before noon, just as Jasper's barbecue pits were beginning to send forth absolutely maddening aromas.

Nell whirled up the hill first and turned her auto across the road by the bluff with that rakish skill of hers that always sends my heart into my throat. And whom did she have sitting at her blue embroidered luncheon elbow but Richard Hall himself? Good old big, strong, dandy Dickie, how great it was to see him again, and if I had had my own heart in my breast it would have leaped with delight at the sight of him! But even the Crag's that I had exchanged mine for, though it was an entire stranger to Dickie, beat fast enough in sympathy with the dance in my eyes to send the color up to my face in good fashion as I hurried across a lump of goldenrod to meet him.

"Evelina, the lovely!" he exclaimed in his big booming voice as he took me by both shoulders and shook me

Instead of shaking merely my hand. "Richard the royal!" I answered in our old quarter Latin form of greeting. I didn't look right into his eyes as I always had, however, and something sent a keen pain through the exchanged heart in my breast at the thought that I might be obliged to hurt the dandy old dear.

But suddenly the sight of Nell's loveliness cheered me. She had had Dick in that car with her ever since 9 o'clock, almost three hours, showing him the sights of that teeming heavy lush harvest countryside around Bolivar and Glendale, all over which are low roofed old country houses which brood over families that cluster around the unit that one man and a woman make in their commonwealth. Nell's eyes were sweet as she looked at him. I'll wait and see if I need to worry over him. With the fervor I felt I had a right to, I then avoided the issue of Richard's eyes, put it up to God and Nell, and introduced him to Jane.

And while the three of them stood waiting for Nell to buck up the auto and put her spark plug in her pocket—only Richard calmly took it and put it in his—the rest of the cars came up the hill and turned into the edge of the goldenrod.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

According to the high price of paper no doubt considerable of an industry will be worked up in the next month or two collecting the useless and discarded election cards and campaign literature.
